City May Require Radio Permits From Fire Chief

Corporation Counsel Jenkins Directed to Draft Radio Ordinance—Fire Alarm Superintendent to Make Inspections—No Charge for Permit or Inspection.

The common council Tuesday evening adopted the report of the laws and rules committee recommending that Corporation Counsel James Jenkins be directed to draft a radio ordinance for Kingston. The report recommended that before a radio outfit can be installed a permit must be obtained from the chief of the fire department: After installation of the set it is to be inspected by the superintendent of the fire alarm system. The proposed ordinance is to provide that there be no fee or charge for obtaining a radio permit or having it inspected.

Alderman Urban G. Edinger, chairman of the laws and rules committee, submitted the report which follows:

In view of the great public interest in wireless telephony and the many additional radio sets being installed in the city, your committee to whom was referred the question as to the necessity and advisability of enacting an ordinance regulating the installation of such apparatus respectfully reports as follows:

First, we find that in some instances such inspections are made by the Board of Fire Underwriters but, no application being required for an installation, many radios are installed without the knowledge of said underwriters and without a realization of the dangers to life and property. We, therefore, recommend

That, before installing a radio outfit in any building in this city, it shall be necessary to obtain a permit from the Chief of the Fire Department. also

That, the clerk of the fire board shall keep a record of all permits granted, and notify the superintendent of the fire alarm, who shall upon the completion of the work, make a thorough inspection of the same and report to the Board of Fire Commissioners in case such work is not in conformity with the fire laws, etc., also

That all outside aerials be protected with a lightning arrester and all wiring be done in accordance with such regulations as may be approved by the Board of Fire Underwriters or the Board of Fire Commissioners, also

That no charge be made for said permits or the inspections hereby provided for. also

That the Corporation Counsel be and he is hereby directed to draft an ordinance in conformity with the foregoing findings.

It is expected that the corporation counsel will have the proposed ordinance ready for submission at the April meeting of the common council.

Other matters taken up at the meeting will be found elsewhere.

To Prohibit Gas Pumps on B'way

Alderman Edinger Introduces Ordinance Fixing License Fee of $15 Per Year for Curb Pumps, and Banning Them From Broadway.

Alderman Urban G. Edinger, chairman of the laws and rules committee, introduced an ordinance banning gas pumps from Broadway and fixing a license fee of $15 per year for all curb pumps within the city, at the meeting of the common council Tuesday evening at the city hall. The ordinance was referred to the laws and rules committee and will be reported on at the April meeting of the council.

President E. J. Dempsey presided at the session with Aldermen Van Wagenen, Beichert, James J. Sweeney, Schlip, Fox, Joy, Seitz, John T. Sweeney, Edinger, Neice, Everett, Smith and Flannery present.

Women in Attendance.

A delegation of twenty-five women headed by Mrs. C. N. Reed, chairman of the good government committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs, attended the session. There were also three men present at the meeting.

All of the meetings of the common council are open to the public but are slimly attended, unless it is rumored that a question of interest is to come up. The meeting Tuesday had the largest attendance this year.

Wants $1,000 Damages.

Theresa Jordan of 27 Adams street filed a claim for $1,000 damages for personal injuries she claims she sustained in a fall on a sidewalk on Clinton avenue on February 15. The claim was referred to the corporation counsel and the finance committee.

To Renew Notes.

The council granted the board of public works permission to renew a note for $5,500 covering money that had been borrowed to pay the estimated cost of the city's share of the Cornell street grade crossing elimination.

Authority was also granted the board of public works to renew a note for $19,000.62 the city's estimated share of the cost of construction of the new bridge over the Esopus creek at Rizzardsville.

Other matters taken up will be found elsewhere.

Officers Named By the President

Sends Large Number of Nominations to the Senate Which Refers Them to Committee—Colonel Donovan Approved for Assistant Attorney General.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, March 18.—President Coolidge sent to the senate ready for its consideration when it convened at noon today a large batch of nominations for officials in the Federal judiciary, the diplomatic corps, the treasury department and the Federal trade commission.

The nominations were referred to committees immediately and action was to be taken on all of them during the afternoon, after which the Sixty-ninth Senate will adjourn sine die until next December.

Committee Approves Donovan.

Among the nominations was that of William J. Donovan of New York to be assistant to the attorney general.

Donovan at present is an assistant attorney general and in his new position will succeed to the vacancy created by the resignation of A. E. Seymour.

The judiciary committee later approved Colonel Donovan's nomination.

Democrats Oppose Woodlock.

A storm of protest arose among southern Democrats, when President Coolidge resubmitted to the senate the nomination of Thomas F. Woodlock, of New York, as a member of the interstate commerce commission.

Woodlock's appointment was blocked by Democrats in the last session and they announced today they again would vigorously fight confirmation.

"I will certainly fight to the last ditch any appointment to the commission of a man who does not come from the south or southwest," declared Senator Smith, Democrat of South Carolina, who led the attack upon Woodlock last season.

Democrats contended that the south was now unrepresented on the commission and that to appoint another man from the north would be prejudicial to the south's interests.

After a poll of his colleagues, Smith announced that Woodlock cannot be confirmed now.

"If President Coolidge wants Woodlock on the commission he will have to give him a recess appointment," said Smith.

In face of this threat, Senator Watson, Republican of Indiana called a meeting of the interstate commerce committee for 2:30 o'clock to consider the nomination.

Board of Tax Appeals.

President Coolidge sent to the senate the nominations of the following to be members of the board of tax appeals:

William R. Green, Jr., of Iowa.
Percy W. Phillips, of New York.
Logan Morris of Utah.
William D. Love, of Texas.

Hope Revives for Miners Entombed In West Virginia

Thirty-four Known to Have Been in Mine When Explosion Occurred—Cause of Explosion Unknown—Rescuers Work Frantically.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

At the mouth of mine number 41, Barracksville, West Va., March 18.—Hopes were revived this afternoon for the lives of the 34 men entombed since late last night by an explosion in the mine here of the Bethlehem Mines and Steel Corporation when mine rescue officials joined in denying the false reports which were widely circulated here that two of the men had been found dead near the foot of the mine shaft.

"There is little hope," R. M. Lambie, chief of the state mine department, said in dismissing the widespread rumors that the bodies of from two to six men had been found are being kept at the bottom of the shaft to prevent possible panic or other disorders if they are brought to the surface.

The rescue workers, comprising men from practically every mine station in this state, and from the federal bureau of mines stations at Baltimore and Pittsburgh, are descending into the mine in buckets.

Doctors and nurses in a hospital room at the mine offices are awaiting any bodies recovered. Two ambulances have been ordered to be in instant readiness to carry injured men to Fairmont hospitals, and every other precaution is being taken to make certain any spark of life found in the men when they are recovered will be safeguarded.

Explosion Wrecked Plant.

Fairmont, W. Va., March 18.—A check up by company officials this morning disclosed that 34 men were at work in the mine when the explosion occurred.

The shaft is 303 feet deep and the workings cover many miles under the hills.

The explosion, one of the most terrific in mining annals here, wrecked the plant, virtually demolishing the camp store, shattered windows and doors throughout Barrackville and was felt plainly here.

First came a dull rumbling followed by a deafening report. Then the heavens took on a ghastly glow from a burst of flame, mounting hundreds of feet in the air. The flame shortly was obscured by great clouds of dense black smoke.

The tipple was wrecked and the electric lighting system put completely out of commission, leaving the mine in inky darkness.

In 1916 the same mine was wrecked by a gas explosion that killed 19 miners and a short time later two members of the Pittsburgh bureau of mines were killed by after damp while trying to penetrate the mine.

Worked As Open Shop.

The mine has been working on an open shop basis since last October 1.

Although all officials here and at Barracksville discounted the reports that the explosion might have been caused by labor troubles, Sheriff J. C. Riggins today arrested A. G. Kendall, Clarence Wetzel and M. D. Edmunds. The three were held on "suspicious persons" charges and their actions will be investigated.

One of the men worked four hours in the mine yesterday, and another had worked in it for a week recently.

Throughout the night while rescue efforts were being made scores of women and children crowded around the mouth of the mine awaiting word from the entombed miners. State police and county officers endeavored fruitlessly to force the hysterical women back.

"There'll be another explosion," the officers warned.

The rescue workers, descending to the bottom of the shaft found their way to the entombed men blocked by debris. As the entombed men are from one half to three fourths of a mile from the shaft opening, the most optimistic of the rescue workers were certain the men would not be reached before noon.

Dead mine mules and ponies were found by the workers strengthened the belief that not one of the miners will survive the imprisonment.

Red Cross Relief Prompt.

Washington, March 18.—The Fairmont chapter of the Red Cross was authorized by national headquarters here today to use such funds as it has in emergency relief work for the disaster stricken miners at Fairmont, West Va., and to call upon the national organization for further assistance if needed.

The authorization also stated the chapter's two Red Cross nurses and secretary should be called to immediate duty if necessary.

Sargent Loves Simple Life

New Attorney General Over Six Feet in Height and Weighs 250 Pounds—Played Center on College Football Team.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Ludlow, Vt., March 18.—John Garibaldi Sargent, the new attorney general, has a hobby, his neighbors here said, the collection and repairing of clocks and pipes. At one time he was an enthusiast in honing razors for the fun of it.

Sargent loves the simple life and hated to give up his comfortable little home for what the natives term "city existence." When travelling Sargent uses the smoker coach for a day's journey.

Six feet, three inches tall, and weighing 250 pounds, Sargent played center on the freshman football team at Tufts College.

Sargent's father named all his three sons John—John Reginald, John Wesly and John Garibaldi. The latter is known throughout Vermont as "Gary."

Whitley Sounds Death Knell of Dry Legislature

Republican Senator from Rochester Willing to Risk Office for Sake of Being Right—Voting for Prohibition Is Not Only Qualification for Legislator.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, N. Y., March 18.—What was regarded by the wets as the death knell of the Wales-Jenks state prohibition enforcement bill was sounded today by Senator Whitley, Republican of Rochester.

In a brief in which he bitterly denounced prohibition enforcement, Whitley announced he would not vote for the dry bill. He filed the brief with the codes committee of the senate which is expected to shortly report out the dry measure.

Advocates of prohibition had hoped to induce Whitley to change his mind and vote for the dry bill.

Three other Republican senators, Karle and Nicol of New York and Lipowcz of Buffalo, have passed the word along to the Republican leaders they will not support the dry bill in the upper house. With the 22 Democratic senators and the four Republicans voting against the bill the drys admitted it could not be passed.

The Wales-Jenks state prohibition enforcement bill was reported out by the Senate codes today by a vote of 6 to 5. Two Republicans, Senators Whitley and Lipowcz and three Democrats, Senators Byrne, Walsh and Reiburn voted against representing the bill.

The drys will lack one vote to pass the bill in the upper house. It was passed in the assembly last week with seven votes to spare.

Opponents of the dry bill declared today that with Whitley definitely on record against the measure there was absolutely no chance for its passage in the upper house.

"I do not like hypocrites and pussyfooters and were I to vote for this bill, believing as I do, I would always feel that I were both," said Senator Whitley in his brief. "There are people whose moral code for public regulation is concerned solely with the enactment of this law and they have no time for any other law.

"Their standard of personal respectability and morality is prohibition. Their only requirement as to qualification for a legislator is that he vote dry and thus close further examination of his record.

"But I am willing to take the risk of not being senator for the sake of being right. There are many sincere advocates of state enforcement but I know of many, in and out of the legislature whom, when I hear them cry out for prohibition, I feel inclined to tap them on the hip.

"There are many who are advocating enforcement who surely would have little respect for their representatives if they knew that the enactment of this legislation would take from them the rights and liberties for which their forefathers fought and died.

"The enactment of this law will go further in increasing most scandalous corruption and scandalous contempt for law than we are witnessing under the Volstead law. It will only multiply the number of spies, pretenders, extortionists, blackmailers and hypocrites.

"The intent of this legislation is law enforcement when unmasked and appearing in true colors it is lawless enforcement."

ANTI-KLAN ROTER FOUND GUILTY OF GUN TOTING.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Warren, Ohio, March 18.—Peter Greco, first of the more than 100 indicted for offenses growing out of the Ku Klux Klan and anti-Klan rioting at Niles, November 1, today was found guilty of carrying concealed weapons.

The defense immediately filed a motion for a new trial and Judge J. S. Thomas reserved sentence.

Greco, alleged to have been a leader in the Knights of the Flaming Circle, anti-Klan organization, may be sentenced to from one to three years in the penitentiary and fined $500.

Trial of Louis Corro, another alleged member of the anti-Klan organization, was started immediately.

Vice Conditions Arouse Principal Cullen at Rotary

Kingston School Principal Unbosoms Himself Concerning "Places" Which Thrive Where Poor but Decent People Are Trying to Raise Families.

Kingston Rotarians got a shaking up at their noon luncheon today that created a profound impression when Principal Patrick H. Cullen of School No. 3 addressed them on "Social Conditions in My School District." Principal Cullen did not mince words or try to be diplomatic. He "got it off his chest" without any circumlocution or fear that he might tread on someone's toes.

Principal Cullen opened his remarks with the statement that the conditions he would speak of were not entirely confined to his district but existed to a greater or less extent in other parts of the city. He was speaking as the representative of an industry, the most important industry in Kingston; that of trying to make decent citizens of the children. Twenty-five years ago the School No. 3 district was inhabited by people who spoke English with an Irish accent and people who tried to speak English with a German accent. The character of this population has changed. Jewish people came in and the Irish and Germans moved out. Owing to cheap rents, others have come in during the past two years, people usually termed American, honest folks but not wealthy. It is their children that the school is trying to fit to take the places of the decent men and women of today.

But another element has also come into the district, an element that has no respect for law or decency, an element that makes it unavoidable that the children see things that, for their well-being, should at least remain hidden. This is no plea for the Volstead Law, but it is a plea for law enforcement and respect for law. Because of law violation the school children, who spend most of their time when not in school in the streets, are being taught vile things and disrespect for law. The schools are trying to make decent citizens and surroundings are polluting our future citizenry at the source. There are places that are not good for grown men to see, that the children see and know all about. "Places," they are called, not "saloons," because saloons are unlawful.

"This is no plea for the Volstead Law," said the speaker, "and neither is it a plea for the saloon. I grew up with a horror of the saloon as it used to exist and I would not see it restored, but the saloon that refused to sell drinks to women, to colored people, to children, to the drunken and that would not stand for any viciousness was a hundred, yes, a thousand times better that these 'places.'"

"There was a negro brothel near my school. One afternoon two of the teachers, passing on their way home, saw a negro emerge from this place, shoot another, and advance toward them with smoking pistol, thought he would shoot them next. There are 'places' that boys are permitted and encouraged to hang around in the hope that some day they may have a little money to spend. There is a 'place' on West Strand kept by an alderman and the people who frequent it overflow into the hallways of decent people who live nearby.

"The only offense of these people is that they are poor. But they are decent. Yet they dare do nothing but submit. In one case a mother locked her children in a bed room in order that they might not hear what was going on in her own hallway, occupied by the overflow from this 'place.' There are 30 'places' in Rondout where liquor is sold illegally and 14 at the West Shore. It is sold in all kinds of ostensible stores.

"We try to teach love of country and respect for law and the children go out and see these things. We try to maintain a fortress of civilization and the children see and know vice. We are left alone and law and order seem to have fallen down in the county and become a part of the sewage of the city. We have a murder in the 'place' of an alderman and nothing happens to the 'place.' In Middletown, in a similar case, the aldermen immediately and unanimously adopted an ordinance licensing all places in which drinks were sold, providing for raised window curtains and otherwise regulating them. A Kingston man prepared to agitate for such an ordinance here. I offered to help and come to the front. He found plenty of men who said they favored it, but not another who would come to the front and fight for it publicly.

"You would not stand it in your neighborhood. When I was a boy in Wilbur, and the only difference between Wilbur and Ireland was 3,000 miles of distance, an undesirable hired a house and moved in with his women. He was there one day when a committee appointed by nobody waited on him and told him they would refund his rent for the month but he must move. He said he didn't want to move, but the committee told him his desire did not count and he was going to move next day. He did. That was not what lawyers call due process of law, but what are you going to do if there is no law, or at least officials do not enforce the law?

"Are you men going to sit still while the women gently shed their tears of suffrage by doing what their husbands and fathers and brothers should have done long ago?" The police are aware of certain places and the district attorney is blind and the county judge is a good man but so full of sentiment that he scarce ever inflicts punishment. One of our worst criminals says he is a good judge, because he never punishes anyone.

"You cannot blame it on the foreigners. The Nordics still make the law. There are foreigners who do not understand true liberty. They must be made to obey the laws. They have been oppressed so long that they misuse liberty, like the sailors or sailors who get off in the states to let you pass when they first arrive, but two weeks later will crowd your wife off in the gutter. We must make them know disobedience to law is not a joke. We must get over the notion that the only law we need obey is the one we like. What are you, decent men, going to do about it?"

Preceding Principal Cullen's address Miss Fisher, of the Home Bureau, asked cooperation in the coming milk campaign and President Feenaden was authorized to appoint representatives on the general committee.

Thirty-two members registered for the Lake Mohonk Rotary Conference in May and Lloyd M. Hicks, chairman of the local reception committee, expects to round up the remainder before Saturday noon.

Complex Issues Confront Sargent

New Attorney General Will Find Need For His Rugged Constitution in Meeting Problems—Some Are New, Others Inherited From Days of Daugherty.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, March 18.—When John Garibaldi Sargent, the new attorney general, steps into the department of justice tomorrow he will confront an array of complex issues and problems such as few of his predecessors have faced at the outset of their administrations.

The new attorney general is described by his intimates in Washington as a "rugged country lawyer with a record of quiet industry." His assistants at the department admitted today that the mountainous stack of work at the department would require all his ruggedness.

Some of the problems that confront the new attorney general are inherited from the Daugherty administration—notably the prosecution of the case against Senator Burton K. Wheeler for alleged conspiracy in the use of influence in government departments.

Attorney General Stone supported Daugherty's policy in this noted case, which is now pending in the courts of Montana and the District of Columbia.

Another important case which Sargent will have to jump into at once is the court test of the legality of publishing income tax returns—set for argument before the Supreme Court on April 13.

War fraud cases, hanging fire for several years; a number of anti-trust prosecutions; enforcement of the packers' consent decree; investigations into numerous cases arising under the Sherman law and the Clayton act and involving alleged combinations in restraint of trade—these are the outstanding matters with which the Vermont attorney general will have to deal with in the months immediately ahead.

It is probable that a quiet reorganization of the department will take place under the new attorney general.

Solicitor General James M. Beck will shortly retire. It was understood he already has submitted his resignation, although no public announcement of it has been made. Beck has twice been a candidate for the attorney generalship himself.

The new attorney general was due to arrive in Washington this afternoon for his conference with Mr. Coolidge.

An interesting program has been arranged for the service.

Reduce Direct or Income Tax Is Albany Problem

Republican Leaders Believe More People Will Be Affected by Reducing Direct State Tax and Therefore Favor That Plan Over Smith Proposal.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, N. Y., March 18.—The Republican leaders of the legislature had Governor Smith guessing on tax reduction today.

While the Republicans virtually have agreed to a general reduction in the appropriations, they have not consented to pass a bill, as urged by the governor, providing for a 25 per cent cut in the income tax.

It was reliably reported at the capitol today that the Republican leaders are planning to go along with the governor in reducing the appropriation bills and then to suddenly provide for a reduction of one-half point in the direct state tax without making any provision for slashing the income tax.

The Republican leaders have declared on several occasions they were more interested in reducing the direct tax than the income tax. They claim a reduction in the direct tax would benefit more persons than a cut in the income tax.

A cut of one-half point in the direct tax would mean a saving of approximately $8,000,000 to property owners in the state. The reduction of 25 per cent in the income tax, urged by the governor, would mean a saving of about $8,500,000 to income tax payers.

The Republican leaders, in view of what the budget for the next fiscal year was expected to total, had about given up all hope of reducing or even preventing an increase in the direct tax. Now, it was declared, they see an opportunity to bring about a slight cut in the property tax if the governor slashes enough from the appropriation bills.

Both the governor and the Republican leaders admit it will not be possible to reduce both the income tax and the direct tax.

An indication the Republicans are thinking more seriously of the direct tax than the income tax was seen in a statement issued today by Senator Knight, Republican leader of the upper house.

"When Governor Smith talks about the vast benefit income taxpayers would receive under his proposed 25 per cent reduction in income tax payments he overdraws the picture," Knight said.

"He actually expects us to believe that more than 850,000 persons in the state will be pleased beyond measure on getting an average reduction of 1.64 apiece. This is about what approximately 85 per cent of state income taxpayers received under the 25 per cent reduction granted last year.

"The trouble is that the entire question of income tax reduction has been placed by the governor under a magnifying glass and made to look more advantageous to the general public than it really is."

Meanwhile the tax reduction talk goes merrily on.

Barge Overturns, Captain Drowned

A Canal Boat, Laden With Cement, Capsized Off Newburgh Monday—Captain Dorgwardt Drowned—Body Still Missing in Hudson River.

A canal boat, laden with cement, one of the several in a tow bound for New York in charge of the Cornell Line tugs Victoria and Perseverance, broke away from the tows near Newburgh early Monday and capsized. Fred Dorgwardt of New York city, in charge of the barge, is thought to have been drowned. His body had not been recovered from the Hudson river up to noon today, it was stated at the Cornell Line office here.

Just how the accident happened is not known, but it is thought that the barge sprung a leak and capsized without warning. The tug Victoria searched Newburgh Bay in the hope of finding the missing man, but the search proved unsuccessful.

The canal boat had been loaded with cement at Hudson and was on the way down the river. It was thought at first that Dorgwardt had his wife and two small children with him on the barge, but it was later learned that he was alone.

The upset canal boat was tied up to a dock in Newburgh but later broke loose and drifted on down the river and was found beached at Plum point. She was righted and later in the day was towed to the Hilebrant shipyard at South Rondout where she is undergoing repairs.

The tug Victoria in her search of Newburgh Bay picked up the cabin of the barge which was found floating in the water near the Newburgh Yacht Club. It is thought that when the barge upset the captain was in his berth in the cabin and both he and the cabin were swept loose from the barge.

Planning New Traffic Drive

Secretary of Commerce Hoover Finds 1924 Record Stimulus to Further Effort—Utilizing Various Agencies to Meet Pressing Problem.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, March 18.—Rigid enforcement of existing traffic laws will do more than anything else to reduce the automobile accident rate, according to the steering committee of the national conference on street and highway safety, which announced today its program for the coming year. One feature of that program will be an intensive study of the problem of adequate traffic enforcement.

New committees will be appointed by Secretary Hoover, chairman of the conference, to deal with (1) Uniformity of laws and regulations; (2) Enforcement; (3) Causes of accidents; and (4) Metropolitan traffic facilities. The standing committees on statistics and public relations will continue their work during the interval prior to the second national conference to be held next fall.

1924 Purpose Accomplished.

The steering committee, which includes the committee on public relations, met on February 26, to consider progress made as well as plans for continuing the work of the conference. Secretary of Commerce Hoover stated that in his opinion two purposes of the 1924 conference had been accomplished. These were first, to focus public opinion on the appalling traffic accidents and death rate each year and, second, to prepare a comprehensive national program of accident prevention given in the report of the 1924 conference. He recognized the contribution which is being made to accident prevention by the daily press, no national humanitarian movement having ever received finer cooperation from the newspapers.

George M Graham, chairman of the committee on public relations, presented figures showing a marked reduction in the accident death rate in a large number of cities during the last few months of 1924, and in January, 1925, calling particular attention to the fact that in 28 of 68 cities having a population of 100,000 or more there has been a reduction in fatalities and that 7 of the 10 leading cities of the United States showed a reduction of 34 per cent in fatal automobile accidents during January, 1925, over January, 1924.

Railway Accident Reduced.

Supplementing the figures presented by Mr. Graham, C. L. Bardo, general manager of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, representing the American Railway Association, reported a reduction to 1,957 in the number of grade crossing fatalities for 11 months of 1924, as compared with 2,048 for the same period in 1923. The improvement took place in the last half of the year, the figures being 1,158 for June-November, inclusive, 1924, against 1,304 for June-November, inclusive, 1923, a decrease of 11.2 per cent.

Strict Enforcement—Less Accidents.

In discussion of the figures presented to the committee it was pointed out that in those communities where the traffic laws and regulations are rigidly enforced there has been a marked reduction in fatalities, indicating that there is a definite relationship between the accident situation and strict enforcement. It was the unanimous opinion of the members of the Steering Committee that the public will sustain the courts in dealing strictly with all traffic offenders and the committee adopted a resolution placing the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety on record as calling upon all officials, including mayors, judges, police magistrates, sheriffs, and other law enforcing officers to rigidly enforce existing traffic laws, rules and regulations.

The entire subject of traffic law enforcement will be referred to a special committee which will undertake a study of the present situation from the point of view of the police, the motor vehicle administrators and the courts, as well as the ways and means for securing more rigid enforcement. This will include a study of the present relation of enforcement to accident reduction as shown by comparative statistics.

Greater Uniformity Needed.

A special committee on uniformity of laws and regulations will take up the question of methods for securing greater uniformity of legislation as between states and between cities of the same state. The 1924 conference in its final report stated: "Uniformity of traffic regulations is essential. This varies from exact uniformity in the case of definitions of terms, rules of the road, signs, signals and highway markings, and rules for passing railroad grade crossings, to essential uniformity in such matters as reports of accidents, parking regulation, motor vehicle design, equipment, inspection and maintenance."

Joseph P. O'Connell, vice president of the national conference of commissioners on uniform state laws, who is a member of the steering committee, stated that this organization would cooperate to the fullest extent with the special committee and the conference in securing uniformity of state laws.

Traffic and Store Patronage.

A third committee which will be appointed by Secretary Hoover will take up the question of metropolitan facilities and will carry on the work of the 1924 committees of city planning and zoning, and construction and engineering, in their relation to the traffic problems of metropolitan areas. An interesting feature of this work will be a study of the relation of the traffic problem to retail store patronage, which the division of domestic commerce of the department of commerce has offered to make for the benefit of the committee.

A fourth new committee will consider the subject of causes of accidents. It has been definitely established that there is little accurate information even as to the immediate causes of accidents, while there has never been any thorough investigation by competent specialists as to what are the underlying causes, particularly with reference to what part, if any, is played by the so-called psychological factor. The steering committee is of the opinion that if ways and means can be found to have a study made of the underlying causes, it will result in a long step forward in any scheme of accident prevention.

Base Work on Statistics.

The special committee on statistics will continue its work of last year in an effort to develop more detailed and accurate statistical information. Dr. J. H. Parmelee, director of the Bureau of Railway Economics, and secretary of the committee on statistics, said that, in his opinion, that committee had only scratched the surface last year. He stated that the members are particularly anxious to carry on the work not only with the hope of developing more accurate and detailed data with regard to the accident rate but also with the idea of developing and establishing uniform methods of gathering and tabulating this data.

It was reported to the public relations committee that the American Electric Railway Association, one of the nine organizations cooperating with Secretary Hoover in the work, had decided to make the street and highway safety program adopted by the National Conference in December the major subject of its publicity work during the year 1925. To this end it will begin in the near future to supply its members with a series of street car posters, to be changed every two weeks, each poster discussing some one of the conclusions or recommendations of the conference. One hundred thousand street cars throughout the United States will be covered, requiring 200,000 posters every two weeks. The committee endorsed this action and adopted a resolution designating it as "one of the most notable efforts that has been made towards spreading broadcast those principles that make for street and highway safety."

Speakers and Radio.

The public relations committee, having already received a number of requests for speakers to address organizations taking up the work of carrying out accident prevention programs in various localities, decided to organize a speakers' bureau with offices in the Department of Commerce to assist in meeting future calls for speakers and materials. A subcommittee to effect this organization was appointed. It was suggested that the radio be used whenever practicable and that local broadcasting stations be requested to include in their programs a brief talk on street and highway safety at least once a week.

Other subcommittees appointed will have as their duties to promote the adoption of the 1924 conference recommendation on safety education in the schools, training of drivers and traffic control officers, and local organization for securing safer traffic conditions.

O'HIGGINS.

The first of the O'Higgins to gain a place in South American history was Ambrose—afterwards known as Ambrosio—who was born in County Meath, Ireland, in 1730, and died in Lima, Peru, 124 years ago today, March 18, 1801. O'Higgins went to Spain when a young man and then became a trader to Chile. Obtaining a commission in the army he rose rapidly, and in 1788 was made Captain-General of Chile. In 1796 the Irish soldier was elevated to the post of Viceroy of Peru, and in Lima he reigned with almost royal pomp until his death.

Even more famous was his son, Bernardo O'Higgins, who, after receiving his education in England, returned to South America to become the leader of the Chilean rebels against the Spanish. With the assistance of a force of Argentines, led by San Martin, he drove the Spaniards from Chile, being rewarded with the appointment of supreme dictator of the Chilean nation. His rule was benevolent and just, like that of his father in Peru, and he is honored by the Chileans as their greatest revolutionary patriot.

PITTSBURGH'S BIRTHDAY.

The city government of Pittsburgh (Pa.) was inaugurated in 1816, under a charter granted 109 years today, March 18, 1816. It was in 1754 that the English began to erect a block-house on the present site of the city, at the suggestion of George Washington. They were driven away by the French, who erected Fort Du Quesne at the junction of the two rivers.

After two unsuccessful attempts to retake the place the English succeeded in 1758, but before retreating the French burned the fort. In the following year a new fort, named in honor of William Pitt, was erected. It was held by Virginia from 1775 to 1779. There are several other Pittsburghs, none, of course, as populous as the Pennsylvania metropolis, although the Kansas city of that name is a very important mining and industrial town with a population of over 18,000.

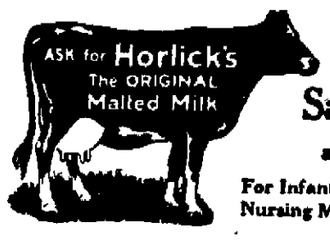

JOCASTA.

Daughter of Creon, king of Thebes, and wife of Laius, was mother to Oedipus, whom she afterwards ignorantly married, and had by him Polynices and Eteocles, who having killed one another in a battle for the succession, Jocasta destroyed herself in grief. She flourished about B. C. 1266.

Her son Oedipus, had been given by Laius, his father, to a shepherd to destroy, as an oracle had foretold that he should be killed by his own son. But the shepherd, not liking to kill the child, left him to perish by hunger, and he was found by Phorbus, shepherd to Polybus, king of Corinth, who brought him up, and Oedipus unwittingly fulfilled the oracle. Sophocles has written a tragedy founded on this story (Oedipus Rex).

When Mr. H. G. Wells listed the ten most important discoveries in man's rise from savagery, he forgot SNOWDRIFT. Isn't that just like a man?

Coach Imperial

A new success added to ten years of succeeding

THE New Coach Imperial is enjoying a notable public reception.

Already it seems destined to be the most sought after Chandler in ten years of Chandler history.

It is the only closed car that combines at touring car price the luxury of Fisher body craftsmanship and the impressive Chandler performance.

It is the only Coach that offers the Pikes Peak Motor and the Traffic Transmission.

The durability of the Chandler chassis was proved at Culver City, Cal., February 4th, when a roadster covered one thousand miles in 689 minutes, an average of 86.96 miles per hour—the fastest 1000 miles ever made on wheels.

Chandler success is the just reward of ten years of sound method; ten years which today find Chandler selling the best car of its history, amply financed, strongly entrenched with a growing dealer organization, and basing growth on conservative policies that give due regard to new economic conditions prevailing in the industry.

(The Traffic Transmission is built complete in the Chandler plant under Campbell patents)

Coral Satin Used for Dainty Frock

Apron Tunic, Formed by Two Circular Pieces, Almost Meets in Back.

The simplicity that distinguishes the fashions of the day is often a most deceiving simplicity, for the effect is achieved by a skill far more subtle than that necessary to design a much more elaborate costume.

The test of a designer lies in knowing what to leave off, not what to add to a frock in the way of ornamentation, and to make each detail count for something in the attainment of that appearance of simplicity that is as smart as it is sophisticated.

In these amazingly simple gowns, it is everything and what may seem to be detail that any one could copy, often turns out to be decidedly tricky and difficult.

A notice[illegible]nture of several of the newest [illegible] the use of apron drapery and while some are merely gathered or plaited affairs, others, like the model sketched, are most ingenious.

One especially attractive gown is fashioned of satin-finished crepe in a ravishing shade of coral. The waist, very long in effect, is drawn into folds at the natural waistline. Beneath these folds the apron-tunic, formed of two circular pieces, ripples in a most graceful fashion, and they are wide enough to almost meet in back.

Two narrow separate panels attached to the shoulders cross just above the waistline and are caught under the apron. In front a delicate tracery of crystal beads is the only attempt at decoration.

Worn with this is a long string of pearls tinted a deep pink. The stockings are nude and the shoes are suede, which matches the tone of the material.

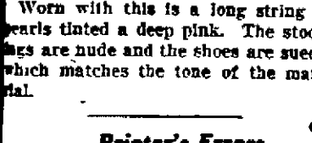

Printer's Errors

There is a story of a German printer's wife who surreptitiously altered the passage that her husband should be (Herr) lord so as to make him be her fool. Perhaps the best of all printers' errors was that in which a printer had to announce to the world that intoxication is folly, and altered it into the more genial statement that "intoxication is jolly." Theodore Beza was stated to have gone to sea in a Candian vessel. The printer altered this to "Canadian" vessel. There is also that reference to the "battle-scarred warrior," which became "bottle-scared warrior!"

World's Earliest Banks

The earliest banks on record were the national temples, such as Delphi and Delos in Greece. The money they received in deposit they loaned out at rates of interest varying from 10 to 30 per cent per year. Private bankers were first heard of in Babylon in the time of Nebuchadnezzar about 600 B. C. Theophile, Tacitus and Suetonius all allude to the existence of banks in their histories.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MARCH 18, 1925.

REAL PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

Secretary Hoover forecasts what the headline writers were quick to epigrammatize into "public ownership of public utilities." In that he is doubtless right. But he must not be interpreted as meaning government ownership. Instead, he means the strongest possible barrier to government ownership, namely, ownership by an increasingly large numbers of people as individuals. Toward such a consummation we seem to be moving rapidly. Statistics show that the number of owners of railroad and other "public utility" stocks has doubled in the last seven years.

In 1918 there were 2,500,000, and now they are 5,000,000. That means that in one family out of every five there is a stockholder in a railroad or some other utility. It means that there are approximately as many stockholders in public utility corporations as there are men employed in all the manufacturing and mechanical industries of the country; that there are nearly twice as many such stockholders as there are men employed on all the railroads and other transportation services of the country; that there are three times as many such stockholders as there are men employed in all sorts whatever of clerical occupations.

Such ownership of the business of the country by the people of the country means, of course, that business will more and more be conducted in the interest of the people, and that more and more the people will regard the integrity and prosperity of great business corporations as their own concern. And it means that the people will not turn the business they thus own over to the government, to be politically mismanaged.

IRELAND'S DISTRESSES.

The comments quoted from Irish newspapers show that grave concern is caused by the increasing tide of emigration from the rural districts of Ireland. The Cork Examiner holds that the soil of that country is capable of supporting a population twice as large as at present, and assures the emigrants that if they would only work "half as hard" on Irish farms as they will have to work in the factories, stores or quays of America, they would not be obliged to go abroad for a living. The solution of the problem, says the Examiner, is in "inducing these young people to remain at home, and showing them that if they just grow more potatoes, turnips, wheat, oats and apples, raise more cattle, breed more hens, ducks, or turkeys, they will have an opportunity of earning a decent livelihood at home."

That may be, but it is not to be wondered at that the out-going youth saw serious and discouraging difficulties at home. A month ago the reports of failure of Irish crops, such as potatoes and oats, stated that wet weather and lack of sunshine were largely concerned, particularly in the west coast region with its "soft cloudy climate." Hardship was added by the loss of fuel supply from the same cause, the peat cut last spring having been made useless by incessant rains, and there being no timber or brush to take its place. In consequence actual famine was threatened in some districts. The accounts indicate that political disturbance is not Ireland's only affliction, and under the circumstances the eagerness of adventurous youth to escape to a land of greater promise is inevitable.

The annual attempt of the Democrats to get control of the state department of agriculture has been made and has been blocked once more by Republicans who are determined that so long as they can prevent it Tammany will not be permitted to take charge of the important bureau. The Democrats are set on obtaining a foothold in the department, their assumption being that if they could fasten a grip on the agricultural affairs of the state through this medium they could build a stronger up-state Democratic organization. There is no doubt as to the intention of the Democrats as to this bureau which means so much to the rural districts.

The New Jersey legislature, under Republican control, having declined to ratify the proposed Child Labor Amendment to the Constitution, as an undesirable invasion of state rights, commendably refuses to abate or relax in any degree that state's laws for the protection of children. In like manner every state that rejects the amendment should vindicate its action by safeguarding the welfare of children as efficiently as could properly be done under the amendment. Thus demonstrate that there is no need of congressional meddling, and there will be none.

AUTO GAS POISONING.

You read from time to time of men who have been found dead in their garages. They were usually found under the car near the exhaust. The garage doors were usually found closed and the engine running. The frequency of these cases aroused some investigators in New York city, and they attempted to make a survey of the air in the garages, and to examine the blood of men working in garages in New York. Unfortunately the men to be investigated didn't enter into the experiment in any great numbers, but the results obtained from those who submitted to the examination were most instructive. About 79 per cent showed a positive test for carbon monoxide, the poison that causes the deaths noted above.

An interesting point was that in some places where there was a considerable amount of carbon monoxide in the air, the men working there did not have any in their blood.

Others, where the air was fairly pure at the time of examination, showed some of this gas in their blood.

It was found that where the man was working about the exhaust, the blood showed a saturation of 22 parts in 100, whilst the gas in the garage air itself, was only 2 to 5,000.

The most desperate thing about this type of poisoning is that this gas actually replaces the oxygen in the blood and the person is simply smothered for lack of this oxygen.

Many of the mechanics testing out engines complained of almost constant headaches.

Some of these men found it necessary to stay off work for a day or two at a time, and then the headache and tired out feeling disappeared.

As mentioned once before, some garages are introducing an up to date ventilating system with the double fans, one fan sending in pure air, and the other withdrawing the used air.

Proper ventilation is the only remedy for this type of poisoning. It is encouraging to see our research men going out to prevent illness and death, instead of simply teaching methods of restoring these "gas" victims when they have been overcome, although that is most important of course.

No Action Yet on Trolley Bus Line

Alderman Beichert of Railroad Committee Reported Progress at Common Council Session—Aldermen Held Brief and Busy Meeting Tuesday Evening.

Alderman J. Philip Beichert, chairman of the railroad committee, at the meeting of the common council at the city hall Tuesday evening, reported progress on the application of the trolley road to operate a bus line over the route of the Colonial Division that it is proposed to abandon. Alderman Beichert stated that the committee had had several meetings with the trolley road officials but it was desired to have a consultation with the corporation counsel before a report was submitted to the council.

The council session was brief, lasting about an hour, with all of the aldermen in attendance.

The following resolutions were introduced:

By Alderman James J. Sweeney—That Lincoln street, east of St. Mary's cemetery, receive some attention; that two incandescent lights be placed on Reynolds street, which had but one light on it; that East Chester street be repaired; that Clifton avenue be repaired; that an arc light be placed on Hemlock avenue, between Tubby street and Clifton avenue; and that an arc light be placed in center of Derrenbacher street and present incandescent light removed; that arc light be placed on Highland avenue, between Park street and Foxhall avenue.

Alderman Neice—That electric light be placed on Prospect street at head of Van Deusen street.

Alderman Fox—That holes and ruts be filled on Gill street from Strand and Yeomans street and that the street be topdressed and rolled; that holes and ruts on North street from Delaware avenue to Beach street be filled; that Delaware avenue from Abruyn street to North street be Willited.

Alderman Flannery—That Brook street be repaired as soon as possible.

Alderman Smith—That crushed stone be placed on Converse street; that small light be placed on Alcazar avenue on the corner toward Forsyth Park; and small light in center of avenue be replaced with a larger light.

Alderman Seits—That Hudson street and German street be repaired.

Alderman Schilp—That Moore street be repaired; that Hasbrouck avenue from Newkirk avenue to Union street be repaired.

Alderman Seitz—That slip in Seventh ward into which sewer empties be dredged as it was a menace.

Alderman John T. Sweeney—That dirt be removed from gratings and catch basins in Eighth ward so that water would run off; that arc light be placed at corner of West Pierpont street and Montrepose avenue and present incandescent light removed as it was too small; that sidewalk in front of School No. 2 be relaid as it was full of ruts in which water formed when it rained and school children got their feet wet.

Other matters taken up will be found elsewhere.

ELLENVILLE

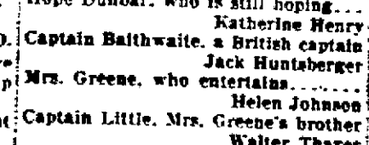

Ellenville, March 17.—"Patty Makes Things Hum," a comedy in three acts, was presented by the Junior Class of Ellenville High School on Thursday and Friday evenings, March 12th and 13th. The play, which was under the direction of Miss Ethel M. Doig and Miss Grace H Lazarus, was very well rendered, all of the characters portraying their parts with splendid effect. Dancing followed the performance on Friday evening, with music by Rosenthal's orchestra. The High School orchestra played several numbers "between the acts," which were exceedingly well rendered. The cast of characters in order of their appearance follow:

Hyacinth, a colored maid Carol Stevens
Mrs. Smith, a true friend Rae Berger
Hope Dunbar, who is still hoping Katherine Henry
Captain Baithwaite, a British captain Jack Huntsberger
Mrs. Greene, who entertains Helen Johnson
Captain Little, Mrs. Greene's brother Walter Thayer

In the Right Place

The Somerset (England) Football association council was amused by a remarkable coincidence of names during the investigation of the circumstances in which the referee had cautioned a certain player. Evidence showed that the player was sandwiched between two of the opposing teams. "You were the meat between two pieces of bread," the chairman asked the player. "Yes," was the unexpected reply. "My name is Ham."

Young men—and older men too, for that matter—should throw their best efforts into their love letters nowadays. Formerly love letters merely were read in court and excerpts printed in newspapers, but now we have radio.

"The missus wasn't feeling very well when I left home this morning," said Ragson Tatters. "Guess I'll call her up and see if anything should be done." He went to the phone and called the number. "She's all right now," he said, hanging up the receiver. "The line's busy."

A Questionnaire to Mars.

Hello, Mars! The earth is talking—
Do your flappers bob their hair?
Do your grandmas dance the Java?
Have you prohibition there?
One-piece bathing suits, high prices
Ladies' knickers, near-jade beads,
Petting parties, jazz, sex novels,
Saxophones, weird, occult creeds?
Have you fluffy female bandits?
Bootleggers and human tanks?
Booms and boosters, income taxes,
Autos that you start with cranks?
Free verse, soul-mates, hooch and flivvers,
Vamps and would-be movie stars?
No? Why, then you must be heaven;
I'm coming over, Mars.

WALLKILL.

Wallkill, March 18.—A home talent play will be given in the Plattekill Grange Hall Monday evening, March 23, by young people from Modena. The proceeds will be divided between the Grange and Modena Sunday school. This play has been given at Modena with great success.

One of the most interesting meetings of the year was held at the Grange Hall Saturday evening, March 14. In the absence of the master, Overseer Charles Everett presided. The Home Economics committee is making a great many improvements in the hall, a new silk flag, with staff and a new rug being purchased at this meeting. The program committee presented the first edition of the Grange magazine, including advertisements, stories, editorials, music review, etc., by pantomime and dialogues in a very entertaining manner. Much credit is due to this committee, also to the refreshment committee who were on hand with ice cream and cake. The next meeting will be held March 28th with the following committees in charge: Program, Mary Dusinberre, Gertrude Alsdorf, Mrs. R. Ward. Refreshments, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Birch, Mrs. M. Birch, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Van Wyck, Sheldon Edmunds.

Mrs. Walter Burland of Glenford spent Thursday with Mrs. O. F. DeGraff.

Miss Ruth Stratton of Kingston spent the week end with Miss Elizabeth DeGraff.

Wilson Rongeul, Jr., of Lake Hill called in this place on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Shultis of Phoenicia visited relatives in this place on Sunday.

The Glenford young people are at present rehearsing for a play, entitled "Your Father," which will be staged within a few weeks.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

READY FOR MORNING

Mahalia's little cousin Florence had come to visit her.

The days were so filled with things to do that they never had enough time to do all they planned.

"It's such a nuisance," Mahalia said, "to get undressed every night and get dressed again every morning. It takes up so much time just doing the same thing over and over again.

"Of course there are our baths. But it seems as though every other night we might just go to bed with our clothes on and so save all that time."

"Let's do it tonight so we'll be all ready for tomorrow," Florence suggested.

"Yes, we've got so much to do tomorrow," Mahalia said. "And it will give us a splendid start of half an hour anyway if we don't have to get dressed."

But after they were in Mahalia's room it seemed funny not to begin taking off their clothes.

"I suppose we'd better comb our hair and do our faces and teeth," Mahalia suggested.

"Yes, I suppose we'd better do that much. I tell you, let's wash our faces awfully hard so they'll stay clean over night."

"That's a good idea," Mahalia agreed.

So they combed their hair and brushed their teeth and washed their faces, until their faces actually hurt from scrubbing. Then they both stretched themselves on the bed.

"I don't think it's very nice not to take our shoes off—on account of the bed," Mahalia said.

"That's true. Your mother mightn't like it. Not that I'd mind keeping my shoes on but your mother mightn't like it."

"Yes, I was just thinking of my mother," Mahalia said, a little weakly.

Once more they stretched themselves upon the bed. Their feet felt a little cool and they pulled the quilt over them.

But now they felt too warm.

"It will be wonderful to get right out to play tomorrow, won't it?" Mahalia said, as though she had a few little bits of doubt about it now.

It's Eleven o'Clock.

"Yes, fine," Florence answered, in just about the same tone.

"I think maybe," she added, "I'd better take off my dress. I only have one other with me you know, now that my white one is all dirty. Your mother might wonder why it looked so mussed."

So she took off her dress.

"Maybe I'd better do the same," Mahalia said.

Then they decided to stay as they were. It would only take a minute or two to slip on their dresses and shoes. Otherwise they were all ready.

It was very hard to get to sleep. They tossed about and didn't know whether their arms felt chilly or whether they felt too warm with their clothes on and the quilt over them as well.

But they stayed as they were with the clock striking the hours and the half-hours.

It took the clock so long to get around to the half-hours and the hours during the night.

"I don't seem to feel very sleepy," Florence said after a long time during which they'd tried to keep very quiet so as not to disturb the other who might be sleeping.

"Neither do I," Mahalia said. Florence had known she was still awake as Mahalia had gently cleared her throat to let Florence know it in case she too was awake.

"In fact I feel so wide-awake. I think maybe it's my stockings. But I don't want to take them off as they take some time to get on in the morning. Several minutes, anyway."

"Maybe we'll stay awake right through the night," Florence suggested. "How early do you think we could get up?"

"Well, not before quarter of six anyway. I don't suppose. And it's only twelve now."

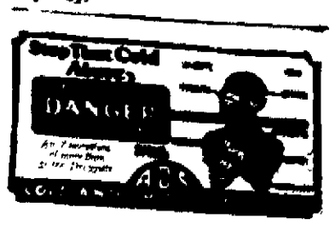

They heard the clock strike half-past twelve, one, half-past one, two. Then they fell asleep.

The sun was very bright when Mahalia's mother came into the room.

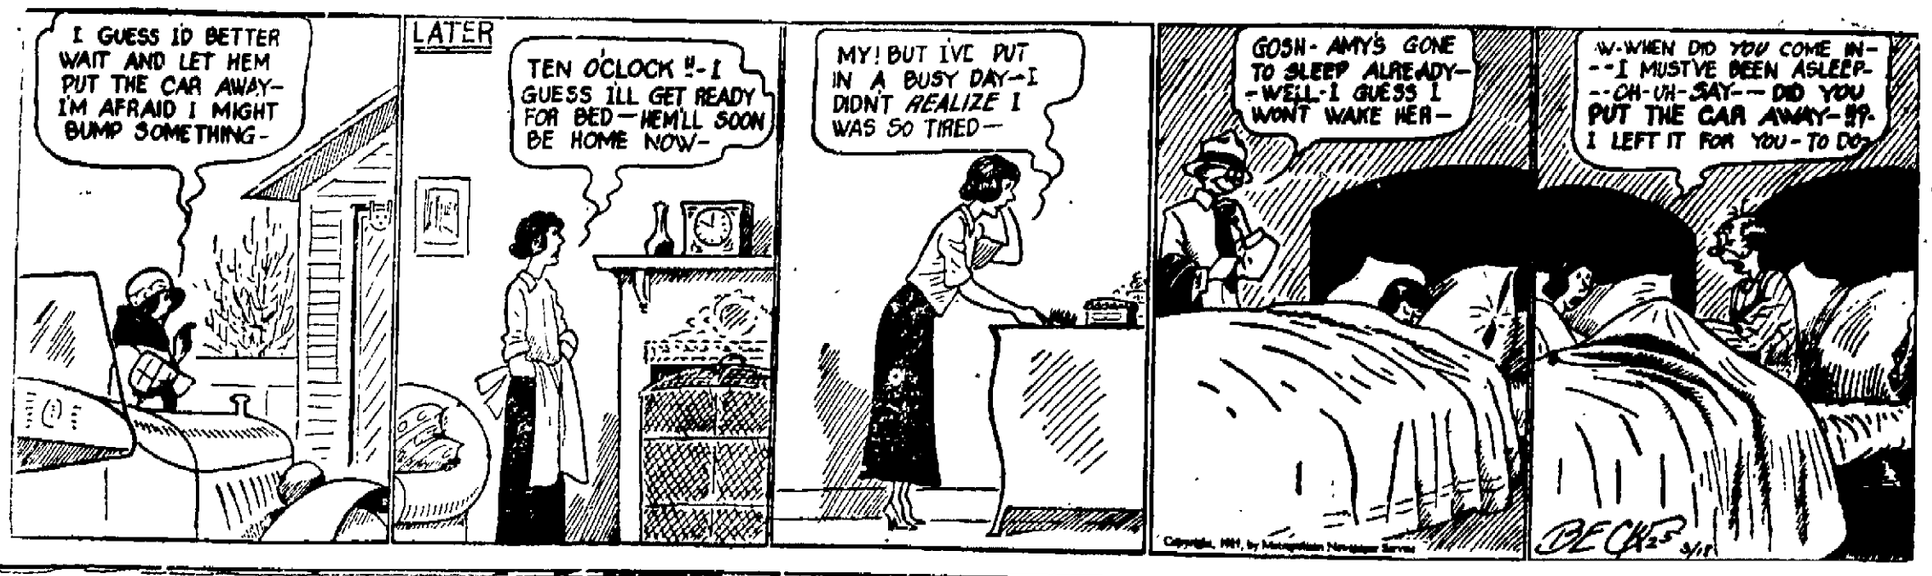

"I thought you two were going to get up early this morning. Do you know it's eleven o'clock?"

They pulled the quilt around them so she wouldn't know they had never undressed.

"I suppose that's the reason why people do get undressed every single night," Mahalia said, "so they can sleep easily. It's stupid but it's the only way."

FOR DINNER TODAY

Fruit and vegetables are essential to health: eggs when moderate in price should be used freely in the menu as a substitute for meat.

Fruit Salad.—Pour a cupful of boiling water over one-half pound of dates and drain dry; cut into lengths and remove the stones. Add to the dates one cupful of finely diced apple, two slices of finely cut pineapple; the apple and pineapple may be cut into strips if desired; sprinkle with salt and two tablespoonfuls of French dressing and one-half cupful of finely cut celery. Let stand one hour then serve with mayonnaise and whipped cream, using a cupful of cream to two tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise dressing. Serve in apple cups or on lettuce.

Chop Suey.—Take two pounds either pork or veal with a little beef or chicken, four onions cut into small pieces, three stalks of celery cut into bits, one can of bean sprouts, a half-dozen Chinese water nuts or potatoes, two teaspoonfuls of bead molasses, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Heat a little fat in a saucepan, add the meat and brown, cook until nearly done, then add the vegetables, one cupful of meat stock, or water, the seasonings and molasses. Cover and cook one hour, using great care to keep from scorching. Serve with boiled rice and soy sauce.

Cream Dressing.—Mix three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of mustard, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika, and four tablespoonfuls of flour; stir until well-blended; add one cupful of water and bring to the boiling point, stirring constantly. Remove from the heat and pour on to the well-beaten yolks of two eggs. Cook in a double boiler until thick and smooth. Add one tablespoonful of butter or olive oil, cool and add one-third cupful of lemon juice, stirring until well mixed. Beat one cupful of cream until stiff and fold into the chilled dressing.

Nellie Maxwell

Colored Deities

"People are showing astonishment over Marcus Garvey's black deity. They consider a black deity an innovation, a blasphemous innovation. Well, they are wrong."

The speaker was a colporteur. He went on:

"Look at this picture of the holy family. It's for our Chinese mission."

The Mary of the picture was a Chinese woman, with dwarfed feet, trousers and slanting eyes; Joseph was an old fellow with a queue; the divine child had the flat nose and oblique eyes of China.

"Here," the colporteur continued, "is a holy family for the Congo."

Mary in the Congo picture was fat and black, with crinkly hair; Joseph was a robust black warrior, a spear in his hand, a girdle of feathers round his loins; the infant was black, too.

"Our holy families for missionary use," the colporteur ended, "are always made in the likeness of the people who are to study them. These simple and childlike people would be estranged and repelled by a white holy family. Only this sort shows them the deity's real kinship with themselves."—Detroit Free Press.

The Divorce Evil

"For every seven marriages in the United States there is one divorce. This is a shocking state of things."

Theodore W. Martin of the international divorce commission was speaking before the W. C. T. U. of Richmond.

"If the young bride and bridegroom would live up to their original resolves," Mr. Martin went on, "divorce would disappear.

"The young bride and bridegroom marry with the resolve to share one another's joys and sorrows, ambitions and troubles, hopes and fears, but too often all they share, alas, is one another's hair brushes and towels and sometimes."

Canadian's Feat Make Marathon Look Simp

Marathon races get their name fro the feat of the great Greek runne Pheidippides, who carried the news o the victory over the Persians fro Marathon to Athens. That was abou 26 miles, and besides the battle bein the turning point in the history o Europe, it was made forever dramati by the fact that the runner droppe dead on finishing his journey.

That was a mild journey compare with a Canadian episode which ha been unearthed by W. J. Healy and described in the Winnipeg Tribune Jean Baptiste Lagimoniere was a resi dent at Fort Garry (now Winnipeg) in 1815, when the growing hostilities between the Hudson's Bay company and the Northwest company led to a crisis which called for quick action. Lagimoniere was a man of thirty-five, whose fifteen years in the West had made him a noted hunter and coureur de bois, when Colin Robertson, who was in charge of the stockaded stronghold of the Selkirk settlement at Fort Douglas, asked him to deliver a letter to Lord Selkirk in Montreal.

Lagimoniere set out on foot with instructions to carry the letter as swiftly as possible to Lord Selkirk, informing him of the danger and asking him for help. It was a journey of 1,800 miles through much wilderness, which in some parts was made still more dangerous by the presence of Northwest company scouts. The runner set out, therefore, in the direction of Pembina, as if on a hunting trip, and making a wide circle he traveled by Warroad, Rainy River and Fort William, thence to Detroit. East of Detroit he was overtaken by a mail carrier to whom, being far from the fur traders' capital, he told his mission. The mail carrier then offered to take him all the way to Montreal, provided he were allowed to deliver the letter to Selkirk.

Jean Baptiste told that generous and enterprising mail carrier that he had promised to carry the letter himself to Lord Selkirk and that he would do it unless he died on the way. Then he jumped out of the mail carrier's sleigh and continued his journey on foot.

Montreal was reached on New Year's eve, or two months after the journey was started, and Lady Selkirk joined her husband in the warm welcome to the hardy messenger.

Lagimoniere started back in a couple of days with a reassuring message, but near Fort William he was taken prisoner by a party of Indians on the lookout for him on the request of the Northwesterns. He was held for some months and released only when Fort William was captured by Lord Selkirk. The massacre of Seven Oaks, a battle between the forces of the warring fur trading companies, occurred that summer at Winnipeg, but peace followed and Lagimoniere lived until 1855.

Early English Toll Road

The first English toll road led from St. Giles-in-the-Fields to the village of Charing, now central London. It continued from Charing to Temple bar and, turning, went along to Perpoole. Parliament authorized the levying of the first toll on this road in 1346.

CLEVER AND CHIC.

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

Ingenuity is the word which is perhaps first to come to mind in attempting to paint any sort of a word picture of spring clothes.

The difference between this season and last are just the clever little differences that tricky little details provide, and it is the cleverness of the trimmings that has brought about a desire for more.

After hats, which have been almost devoid of any semblance of trimming, we find trimming conforming to the silhouette, but trimming for all that. After seasons when dresses depended only on their ability to make one appear slender, we are now demanding of our frocks originality, movement, color, and because these demands are made upon them, dress creators are living up to our expectations.

We find dresses registering not alone because of any fabric interest, but because they are cleverly executed—and trimmed. Tiny buttons are ingeniously introduced—perhaps a straight band of ribbon may have them bordering either side, instead of making a pearl or metal path dim the center.

Ribbon itself is used in so many ways—making straight collars and cuffs, for instance. Heavy grosgrain—even belting—is used in this way, while the use of velvet ribbon is a conspicuous feature.

(Copyright, 1925, Fairchild).

Support for Plant Stalk

A charming support to hold steady the stalk of a plant in a pot consists of a slender stick with a painted wooden bird nailed or glued at its top. Such a bird may be cut, in silhouette, from thin soft wood and painted in bright colors with oil or house paints, and afterward varnished. Even though the work is somewhat roughly done, the effect will still be good.

Flowers, Feathers and Ribbon All on One Hat

Spring ushers in a return of broad, elaborate hats. Here is a creation shown at the annual fashion show of the Retail Millinery association. It is in fine white straw, trimmed with moire ribbon, short feather tips and small roses.

Things to Remember When Washing Silks

Silk is the universal fabric, for it adapts itself to elaborate or simple designs—tailored in finish or beruffled and lace trimmed.

But if one is not careful in washing her silk garments, says a correspondent, they are apt to become faded and bedraggled ere half their days. Extremes of heat and cold are bad for both. Harsh soaps ruin silk as they redden and roughen your face.

Whisk one tablespoonful of a reliable washing powder into a thick lather in a wash bowl half full of very hot water. Add cold water till lukewarm. Dip the garment up and down, pressing suds repeatedly through soiled spots. Rinse in three lukewarm waters. Squeeze water out—do not wring. Roll in a towel, when nearly dry press with a warm iron—never a hot one.

For colored silks, make suds and rinsing waters almost cool. Wash very quickly to keep colors from running.

Never wring or twist silks; it makes the smooth silk threads slip over one another and give a wavy appearance which is permanent. Water should be squeezed or shaken out. It is well to place a very delicate silk between cloths while squeezing.

Don't sprinkle silks. It makes them look spotty and this appearance can only be overcome by relaundering.

Pure white silk (not cream) may be slightly blued.

Press silks on the wrong side while they are still damp, or place a thin cloth over the right side of the silk and iron. The latter method is often better for very thin silk.

A hot iron should never be used on silk. It will cause the silk to split. It also makes it stiff and papery and will yellow it.

Bright Colors Favored in All Paris Fashions

"High colors for street wear and anything but black for formal wear" is the impression gathered from a survey of the Paris fashions. Green in several new dull shades is particularly good, and all of the beige tones are receiving a great deal of favor.

There is no doubt that there is more fullness in skirts, and flares from the knee down are more in evidence than ever. Some plaited effects are introduced to give fullness, but these are not as numerous as the flared lines, which give a great deal of charm to shorter skirts.

Quite a few of the new things suggest a belt-line, and the effect is achieved without breaking the straight line of the silhouette in any way.

While there is a decided trend to get away from simple and bateau necklines, the directoire collar is more talked of than seen, and the scarf as part of the dress is one of the most popular finishings which has gained rather than lost prestige in the mid-season groups.

Deep Fringes Graceful; Provide Nice Decoration

There is something perennially fascinating to women about the careless grace of silk fringes. Perhaps it is an inheritance from primitive days, when wild grasses formed the material with which the eternal feminine gratified her desire for adornment. No doubt the South Sea Island craze has influenced the mode for fringe, while the lovely Spanish shawls have taught American women the beauty of the softly falling fringe border.

An especially lovely ensemble was trimmed with fringe. The chic but simple dress, and the accompanying coat were both bordered with silk fringes in two tiers. The dress was built on wrap-around or coat lines and showed the new surplice line, opening over a lame vest. The supple coat followed exactly the lines of the dress beneath and was lapped over and held at the side.

Taffeta for the Teen-Age Girl

Youthful and charming is a frock of white taffeta with a wide full skirt scalloped around the bottom and edged with a shaped border of yellow taffeta. The tight sleeveless bodice has a shallow demi-train finished with a shaped collar of yellow taffeta similar to the border on the skirt.

FLAT FEET vs. FLAT TIRES

There is a striking similarity between flat feet (fallen arches) and flat tires on an automobile. The difference is that the feet support a far more delicate piece of machinery (the human organism) than do the tires on a car; yet, how many people give the same careful attention to their feet as they do to their automobile?

Braces or arch supports (such as are usually worn) act on your feet as solid tires on cars. In either case it jars your spine and brain. In fact, it affects your entire nervous system.

Our method of adjusting the feet WILL restore fallen arches. No braces. No bandages. No loss of time. An examination costs you nothing.

To Whom It May Concern:

I suffered with pain in my legs and feet for four years, and during this time was treated by several medical doctors for rheumatism. My condition was serious, compelling me at times to wear crutches. I finally consulted Dr. Manfred Broberg, who treated me for fallen arches, with the result that within a month I was restored to normal health.

Dr. M. Broberg:

After weeks of agony and pain, due to fallen arches, I have been cured by your method of treatment.

Signed: (name on request.)
Kingston, Dec. 23, 1921.

Dr. Broberg.

Dear Sir:

I had been suffering a long time with my feet and had been doctored and taking medicine for rheumatism, but since taking your treatments . . . I don't have any more pain in my legs and ankles.

LeFevre Oldest Active Editor

Ralph LeFevre of New Paltz Conducted Newspaper Fifty-five Years —Wrote "History of New Paltz and Its Old Families."

RALPH LE FEVRE.

Ralph LeFevre, editor of the New Paltz Independent, who died at his home in New Paltz on Tuesday in his eighty-first year, was one of the oldest newspaper editors in active service in the United States. For fifty-five years Mr LeFevre was editor of the Independent, and enjoyed a wide acquaintance throughout Ulster county and the Hudson river valley.

Mr LeFevre was a native of New Paltz, where he was born August 25, 1844 He was a son of the late Colonel Josiah P. and Elizabeth LeFevre, and a direct lineal descendant of Simon LeFevre, one of the twelve patentees of New Paltz. Mr. LeFevre's father, Colonel Josiah P. LeFevre, received his title from active service in the New York State Militia, commencing service as a lieutenant, from which rank he rose to lieutenant colonel, and finally to colonel of the Ninety-sixth Regiment.

Mr. LeFevre's education was received in the old New Paltz Academy, which was a famous institution of its day, and at the Albany State Normal School. Shortly after the close of the Civil War he went west and for a time taught school in Texas and Arkansas. After returning to Ulster county, he was elected school commissioner, in 1872, and served for three years

In 1880 he acquired the New Paltz Independent, and conducted is practically up to the time of his death. In recent months most of the active work has been performed by members of his family, but he retained active supervision of the paper and was a regular contributor.

For many years Mr. LeFevre was deeply interested in the early history of New Paltz, and his researches in that line and the genealogical information also acquired were published from week to week over a long term of years in his weekly newspaper. He was urged frequently to write a history of the old Huguenot settlement, and finally in 1903 produced the "History of New Paltz and Its Old Families."

His history of New Paltz was not written with the idea of financial gain. In the preface he stated:

"It is natural for the people of any country or community to feel an interest in the history of their ancestors. Even the most savage nations have carefully cherished traditions of the deeds and prowess of their forefathers.

"To every man the honorable fame of his progenitors is an incentive to emulate their noble deeds.

"In the early settlement of New Paltz and its history for nearly a century afterwards there is such a touch of romance, such a blending of the stern realities of frontier life with the harmony of the poet's age, such noble examples of devotion to the cause of religious liberty, such brotherly kindness toward each other as exiles for a common cause, that the example should not be lost to posterity.

"Our old men are falling around us. The traditions which they cherished are perishing with them. What is to be saved from oblivion must be saved now—in this generation.

"With these feelings we have undertaken the task of gathering up the scattered links of history and joining them in a chain that should stretch down from the days of the Patentees."

The history met with such ready demand from all parts of the United States that a second edition, with some corrections and additions, was brought out a few years later.

During his lifelong residence in New Paltz, Mr. LeFevre was actively interested in the welfare of the village and town. He helped organize the Huguenot Memorial Association, which purchased one of the old stone houses and converted it into a museum for the preservation of some of the ancient relics used by the families who settled there.

In politics, Mr. LeFevre was a staunch Republican, and for many years The Independent fought the battles of Republicanism in that town. His antagonist in such fights was the late Charles J. Ackert, who owned and conducted the New Paltz Times, and while the two men always were on the most friendly personal relations, their papers bristled with political asperations during campaigns. The Times was conducted for several years after Mr. Ackert's death by his widow, but finally was sold to Mr. LeFevre who consolidated it with The Independent.

Mr. LeFevre also was an active member of the Reformed Church of New Paltz, in which he had held various offices. He was for sixteen years president of the Huguenot Memorial Society of New Paltz; was corresponding member of the Huguenot Society of America and corresponding member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society.

On June 2, 1873, Mr. LeFevre married Esther M. Oliver of Marbletown, who survives with three children, Gertrude C., Elizabeth and James O. LeFevre.

The funeral will take place from the New Paltz Reformed Church on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Continue Search At Mt. Pleasant

Whereabouts of LeRoy Schoonmaker Who Disappeared in Woods at Mt. Pleasant Still Baffles Authorities—May Have Committed Suicide or Died From Exposure.

No trace of LeRoy Schoonmaker, who disappeared from Mt. Pleasant on Monday afternoon, has been secured by the authorities or the volunteers, who are searching the woods near the scene. Schoonmaker has either sought shelter in some mountain cabin or is wandering around in the thick wooded section south of Phoenicia, clad only in his underclothing. The authorities have advanced the theory that he may have committed suicide by drowning or hanging. If he has not sought shelter he may have died from exposure as the past two nights in the mountains have been very severe and when he disappeared he had no clothing except his underwear.

That he was in a reasonably sane condition on his arrival at Mt. Pleasant from Ossining, where he had been working is shown from his actions immediately after his arrival. He went to the store at Mt. Pleasant and paid for a carton of cigarettes he bought last December. He tendered a $5 bill in payment and walked away without his change. The storekeeper called his attention to the change due him and he took $3 of the change leaving 60 cents and told the storekeeper to buy a good cigar. His actions were observed to be rational on his arrival although it has been reported that he had been advised by a physician to take a two weeks rest and had come to Mt. Pleasant for that purpose. Whether his mental condition was the cause of this advice on the part of the physician is not known at present.

The search is being continued today to locate him but on account of the rough condition of the country the search progresses slowly. Where he disappeared is one of the wildest and most thinly settled sections of the country. There are thousands of acres of timber land and woods in the vicinity which are traversed by cliffs and valleys making the search not only slow but dangerous.

Performance

For long sustained speed—50, 55, 60, or more miles per hour—you must have a motor of such rigidity that it will not distort under the intense heat developed or the severe stresses imposed.

Granted that the cylinder block and crank case are scientifically designed and finely built, you then must have a crankshaft that cannot deflect an iota, and a lubricating system that guarantees a perfect film of oil all the time.

In the (new series) Rickenbacker Six, there is an extra heavy crankshaft and it is supported in seven big bearings.

Crankshaft is drilled throughout, and oil is forced by powerful pump to each individual bearing under constant pressure; pressure varies according to the needs—in other words, according to the speed at which you are driving.

Only with such a motor—only with such perfect lubrication—was it possible for "Cannon Ball" Baker to drive from Coast to Coast, 3106.5 miles in 71 hours, 33 minutes—actual driving time.

At times he drove 72 miles per hour. At one stage he drove 45 miles per hour, for mile after mile, in second gear!

Try that with any ordinary car!

After ten miles you will agree that this Rickenbacker Six must be a phenomenal automobile.

Drive this Rickenbacker yourself—it will be a revelation to you.

Riga, March 18.—Another 4,000,000 famine sufferers will be added to the millions already under government care, according to a statement of A. Rykoff, president of the Soviet commissar's council in an agency dispatch from Moscow.

Rykoff was quoted as saying an over estimate of the harvest would cause a collapse of the budget.

"Doc" Waterbury, one of the most widely known confidence men and swindlers in the United States, who is remembered in Kingston because of his activities here in 1914, died Tuesday in a little farm house at Enfield, near Ithaca, N. Y., where he was born 51 years ago, according to an Ithaca dispatch to the New York Herald-Tribune.

Since his release from Auburn prison three years ago Waterbury has lived quietly, says the Ithaca dispatch, and about a year ago went to California with his wife to make a new start there. Heart trouble attacked him and, as he was suffering also from Bright's disease, his condition became grave. He expressed the wish that, if the end were near, he would like to die in his old home.

With Mrs. Ford he started to motor across the continent, but became so ill when he reached Chicago that the rest of the journey was made by train. For the last three months he has grown steadily worse and the end came this morning.

During his meteoric career Waterbury victimized men high in public, social and financial life, and, although he was sentenced to Atlanta, Sing Sing and Auburn prisons, he invariably succeeded in obtaining his release for good behavior after serving only small portions of his terms.

His Operations Here.

Waterbury was also known to the Kingston police department. Several years ago he came to Kingston and visited Dr. C. O. Sahler at his sanitarium on Wall street where he represented himself as Irvin S. Cobb, the celebrated writer, and said that for a consideration of several hundred dollars he would give the sanitarium a "write up."

Dr. Sahler later became suspicious and complained to the authorities and Waterbury was arrested at the Hotel Biltmore in New York and brought to Kingston where he was admitted to bail in the sum of $1,500, which was furnished by a surety company.

Later Waterbury "jumped his bail" and went to Canada and was arrested by the New York police at Montreal for a grand larceny offense committed in New York. He was tried, found guilty and sentenced to Sing Sing prison.

While he was serving his sentence in Sing Sing he was indicted here by the Ulster county grand jury, and a warrant was issued and filed with the warden of the prison. At the expiration of Waterbury's term he was brought back to Kingston and pleaded guilty.

He was not sentenced here, however, as he made a settlement of $700 or $800 with Mr Sahler, and was never brought to trial.

Had Various Names.

According to the Herald-Tribune, the police, to whom he was a constant challenge, and the newspapers, in which he was always reappearing in connection with some swindle or another, called Jules H. Ford by several titles. He was known as "the 100 per cent men," "the king of the we-boys" and "the chief of the confidence men."

He had as many aliases as there were letters in his rightful name, and from time to time he appeared in various parts of the United States and in Europe as "'Doc' Waterbury," by which name his familiars best knew him; as "J. H. Ford," "Jules Waterbury," "Robert S. Johnson" and "J. Howard Ford."

Ford was gifted by nature with a prepossessing appearance and a winning personality. He was a salesman par excellence and he might have made "big" money legitimately had he been so disposed. Almost all of his swindles were based upon salesmanship, but almost invariably the thing which he sold he could not deliver.

Prior to 1909, when he was arrested in New York after an exciting chase in which shots were fired, Ford had been active around Washington, where he "sold" to Congressmen and other notables the privilege of having a biographical sketch, with photograph, printed in a mythical volume. At that time he represented himself as attached to the staff of The Associated Press.

This seems to have been the genesis of his "we-boy" schemes. He found it so easy to get money from certain types of the near-great by representing himself as a newspaper man in a position to grant free advertising that for many years all his operations were based upon this idea.

After his adventure in Kingston, again in 1914, Ford was found in New York peddling "life memberships" in the Gridiron Club, of Washington, an organization which is limited as to membership, has no life membership, and is available only to active newspaper correspondents in the capital. Ford got money from several New York physicians on the strength of a forged letter purporting to have been written by the treasurer of the Gridiron Club.

Shone on "White Way."

When not engaged in the practice of his more elaborate swindles, Ford usually was manipulating a check-raising account in some distant bank for the money to support him in luxury. He was a Broadway habitue when Broadway was wide open. He dressed well and spent freely. His criminal record shows him almost always connected in some swindle or other, but once he was arrested on the complaint of a 16-year-old girl who charged that he had attacked her in an office which he had rented under an alias. Altogether, he was arrested six times.

Ford was well educated and "smooth spoken." He boasted on several occasions that he came of one of the best families in the state and posed as a graduate of Cornell University. He was something of a wit and quite a philosopher. When he was arrested in 1916 for the Gridiron Club swindle, he told reporters that he was going to write his autobiography "as a warning to others."

Worked War-Time Scheme.

"I don't know why I am a criminal," Ford was reported as having said at that time. "Perhaps it is a case of dual personality. I could have earned much more by being on the level. I've had my fun and now I have to pay the piper."

But, in 1916, Ford was in trouble again. This time he had adjusted his "we-boy" scheme to the opportunities offered by the war and was engaged in selling subscriptions to a book which, he said, had been declared to be issued the men of the A. E. F. in the French tongue. He approached several wealthy New Yorkers, asking them to buy copies of this entirely supposititious volume which was to be forwarded to the men in France.

This bright idea landed him in Auburn, from which prison he was released in 1922. He immediately was rearrested on an old indictment, but sentence was suspended when he promised to reform, telling Judge Rosalsky that he intended to go to Ithaca to live honestly on the farm where he was born and where, now, he has died.

Prisma Banquet At High School

The annual banquet of the Prisma Society of the High School held Tuesday night in the lunch room was a huge success. It was attended by about 75 Junior and Senior girls of the school. Elsie Tetley, the president, presided. After the members and guests were served with a most appetizing repast under the direction of Miss Schnitzler, the president as toastmaster, called upon the speakers of the evening. Charlotte Wheeler responded with an interesting summary of the work accomplished by Prisma this year. President Tetley then expressed her appreciation of the cooperation of the members of the society in all their undertakings. Professor Van Ingen was then called upon by the toastmaster and greeted the students in his usual witty vein, also referring to the activities of Prisma. Mr. Van Ingen said that Prisma seemed to create a pure wholesome atmosphere felt throughout the entire student body.

The last speaker was Dr. Michael who spoke of the praiseworthy work of Prisma and advised his hearers to make service their ideal and goal in life. The speakers were enthusiastically applauded. St. Patrick's day was remembered before the introduction of the speakers, with appropriate songs of old Erin and the festivities closed with the singing of the school song. The menu was as follows:

Chicken Bouillon. Bread Sticks
Chicken Salad.
Rolls.
Olives. Pickles.
Ice Cream.
Cocoa. Candy.

Annual Election At Saugerties

The annual election of officers of the village of Saugerties resulted Tuesday as follows:

Melvin Gillespy, president; William F. Keenan, treasurer; Charles Wilbur, collector; Walter Rittle, assessor for a term of three years; Edward A Washburn, W. Hoyt Overbagh and George B. Ohley, trustees for two years.

It was voted that the village raise the sum of $2,500 for oiling the streets and removing the snow for 1925 and $2,000 for the extension of Elm street.

CURRENT OFFERINGS AT THE THEATERS.

"Forty Winks," a Paramount picturization of the stage hit, "Lord Chumley," by David Belasco and Henry C. DeMille, is the feature at Keeney's tonight and Thursday. Viola Dana, Theodore Roberts and Raymond Griffith are featured in the principal roles of the production written for the screen by Bertram Millhauser and directed by Paul Iribe and Frank Urson.

Douglas Fairbanks's screen sensation, "The Thief of Bagdad," will be the attraction at the Kingston Opera House four days, commencing tonight. It has been said by the critics in every city where this picture has been shown, that happenings so extraordinary, so amazing, the thought of picturing them had not heretofore been listed among the possibilities.

At the Auditorium tonight, Pola Negri in "Men." Pola as the dancing pet of Paris matches her wits against the kind of men who bargain for souls, revelling as she makes them pay the price of her youth.

"The Roughneck," with George O'Brien, which has created such favorable comment, will have its last showing at the Orpheum tonight. There are two other pictures on the bill. Tomorrow an entire change, consisting of five great vaudeville acts and a Thomas H. Ince production, "Christine of the Hungry Heart," featuring Florence Vidor and Clive Brook.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

Collins Stages Star Comeback

In Major League and Promises to Be Leading Twirler on Ty Cobb's Detroit Team—Quits Bad Habits.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Augusta, Ga., March 18.—According to the American League averages for the season of 1924, which are not only official but final and conclusive, Warren "Rip" Collins, two-gun man right off the Texas range, is the best pitcher at the spring round-up of the Detroit Tigers here. This state of affairs would be hardly credible to a man who had not seen a major league box score in two years.

Two years ago "Rip" Collins was a gent who had all the eccentricities of Rube Waddell and "Bugs" Raymond without 20 per cent of the ability that was their redeeming characteristic.

He is still far from the level of these immortals, but he has so far overcome his natural tendencies as to be the leader of what Ty Cobb terms the best pitching staff Detroit ever had. Collins's story would furnish an excellent groundwork for the celluloid idea of righteousness triumphant.

Was Not Serious.

The young man came to the Yankees' camp at Jacksonville in 1920 with excellent prospects and not the slightest idea of taking training seriously. Miller Huggins wearied of the unequal battle ultimately and sent Collins to Boston in one of the famous or infamous Yankee-Red Sox deals. He outlasted his welcome in Boston with commendable haste.

Rip always had plenty of stuff, however, so Cobb decided to take a chance on him. It seemed to be a bad guess, for Collins's first year in Detroit was far from inspiring, and it seemed only a question of time until he would pass on into the outer darkness of baseball's forgotten.

The young man, however, is nobody's dumbbell. He saw the fine Spencerian script on the club house wall and went into conference with himself as the 1923 season closed. His sole asset consisted of one dependent family. His liabilities were an unfortunate lack of responsibility and the prospect that the early weeks of the 1924 season would furnish him his last chance. He proceeded to cure both in the most approved manner.

Went to Work.

Instead of loafing and enjoying himself in his typical way during the off season he took a job. I use the term job advisedly. It wasn't a position. He became foreman of a gang on a Texas railroad.

It meant going to bed with the folks of the barnyard and arising in the cold gray dawn of the morning after. It meant that Collins's nocturnal pleasures were no more. It meant hard, back-breaking work in the open.

It meant that Collins, in 1924, was destined to take his legitimate place among American League pitchers. It meant, I hope, the beginning of a long and successful career in the major leagues, something that the Rip Collins of 1920-23 had no hope of attaining.

STRANGLER LEWIS NOW READY FOR ALL COMERS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, March 18.—Ed Strangler Lewis was back in form and ready to meet all comers in the wrestling game following his easy defeat of Tommy Draak, a Hollander, in straight falls last night.

Lewis won the first fall in 32.05 with the widely discussed headlock. In the second bout Draak came back and started to rough it so hard that he seemed on the verge of disqualification several times. But Lewis did not enter a protest. He bided his time, secured another deadly headlock and pinned his man down in 4:45.

Joe "Toots" Mondt pinned down the shoulders of Mike Romano, Italian star, with a "jack knife" in 22:56.

Final Billiard Blocks.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 18.—With two blocks won by each player, Jake Schaefer, balkline billiard champion, and Willie Hoppe, the man from whom he took the title several weeks ago, entered the final two blocks today of the 18.2 series of Hoppe's academy. Each block is being played at 400 points. Hoppe winning the match yesterday afternoon, 400 to 147, and Schaefer the evening affair, 400 to 172.

Flying Finn Now Plans Revenge

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 18.—Forced to accept his first defeat in a scratch race in this country when cramps last night caused him to quit in a 5,000 meter run, Paavo Nurmi today spent the morning in planning revenge upon Willie Ritola, the man who ultimately won the race. Nurmi's dominating ambition was to get Ritola in another race at the distance.

His default last night while leading by sixty yards within three laps of the finish, completely stunning the large crowd, was occasioned by a too hearty consumption of veal at dinner, according to Dr. Thomas D. A. Naculey, who attended the athlete.

A Short Stop Is Needed by Connie Mack

Philadelphia Athletics Will be in the Running if Short Stop Galloway Comes Through—"Lefty" Groves is Expected to Do Much.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 18.—Show Connie Elongated Mack a short stop who can roam beyond the confines of a thumb tack and he will show you a ball club that will run one-two-three in the American League this season. This, at least, was the purport of a few well chosen remarks from Cornelius today. He intimated rather strongly that success or failure for the Philadelphia Athletics rested almost entirely with Clarence Galloway, regarded by some as the cream of American League short stops two years ago. Galloway had a bad year last season, however.

"Galloway looks good this spring," Mack declared, "and I have come to regard his showing last year as one of those things that happen to all ball players. If he comes through I don't see how they can keep us out of third place at the very least. That is making what amounts to a prediction and, as a rule, I avoid doing this. However, I'll say this much: The team that wins the pennant will have to beat the Yankees."

Perhaps Connie believes he has the club in question. He certainly thinks he has something highly gratifying. He usually has a harried look in his bleak, gray eye. Today he was as genial as tortoise on a vacation. He fairly beamed on one and all and those close to the ball club allege that his glee is occasioned by the fact that he looks for "Lefty" Groves, his new $100,000 pitcher, to add at least 20 victories to the total compiled by a staff that already was rated within the bounds of adequacy.

Cornelius, to cover the purchase, has given notes to Jack Dunn of Baltimore that will keep the ball club meeting payments for the next 15 years.

"Groves is one of the greatest left handers I have looked at in years," he said. "He has terrific speed, and what is unusual in a left-hander, great control. He will give me my first good pitching staff since the days of Bender, plank and Combs. The rest of the staff will be Rommel, Harris, Heimack, Grey, Meeker, Baumgartner and one or two others.

"Outside of Rommel, my pitchers lacked steadiness in other years. I think experience has taught them to overcome this drawback."

Further reason for the Mackian air of satisfaction is said to emanate from the fact that he has tendered the free and highly beneficial air to Ira Thomas, Danny Murphy and Harry Davis, his old board of strategy, and has replied by appointing his son, Earl, as field captain. This is an innovation if nothing else. It furnished the first example in major league of a non-playing field captain. The young man never even played major league baseball, but Mack believes that harmony is to be preferred over master minding without coordination. He seems to have attained his objective in this respect, for the Athletics give the impression of a highly satisfied group. This is particularly true of Jimmie Dykes, who has been given the regular position at third base for the first time in several years. He had made good.

On the other side of Galloway will be Shop with Joe Hauser playing first base. Bob Hipps, who may or may not escape the nickname of "Snakes," also is making gestures around first base, but "Bing" Miller is slated as Hauser's understudy, if any. Bing is the regular right fielder. The other two outfielders will be Simmons and Will Lamar, with Frank Welch in reserve. Bill Bagwell, up again from Galveston, and Walter French, former West Point football player, are around and about, but going nowhere.

Gordon Cochrane, of Portland, was purchased at the loss of five players to help Cy Perkins behind the plate, but to date, Mack esteems Jimmy Cox more highly. That's another odd angle of this camp. Cox was recommended by Old Frank Baker and not so long ago Frank and Connie were exchanging verbal raspberries. Now they exchange rising young ball players at a profit to both.

In addition to the pitchers mentioned, Mack has taken title to "Riparian" Reitz, from Portsmouth, Va.; Arthur Stokes, from Des Moines who however, may be remodelled into an outfielder; George Wallberg, who had a fine year with Milwaukee; Tom Glass, from Cambridge, Maryland, and Charlie Willis, for the Blueridge League.

Williberg is the most plausible of the lot. It is altogether likely, also, that Marvin Smith from the Three Eye League, will remain as an extra infielder.

Lots of good, clean hitting in this outfit. Greater steadiness and dependability on the defense, too. It looks more like an Athletic ball club than at any time since 1914.
